Venom Week: The Premier Symposium on Venom Science

As we celebrate our 20th Anniversary, we sincerely thank Omaha’s Henry Doorly Zoo & Aquarium for hosting Venom Week X. This extraordinary venue provides a truly unique environment for the most prestigious venom science conference in North America—blending cutting-edge research with one of the most celebrated zoological institutions in the world.

Venom Week is the leading symposium dedicated to the study of all things venomous. Hosted by the North American Society of Toxinology, this renowned event has been bringing together top minds in clinical toxinology, pathophysiology, pharmaceutical research, therapeutics, venomous animal biology, and beyond since 2005. It all began with the seminal symposium “Snakebites in the New Millennium,” held at the University of Nebraska School of Medicine and Omaha’s Henry Doorly Zoo & Aquarium. With the success of that 2005 meeting, it became known as Venom Week I. This Venom Week X, in 2025 — the Year of the Snake — we celebrate two decades exploring “All Things Venomous.”

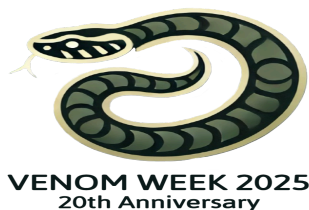

Entering our third decade of Venom Week Symposia, we continue to bring together multidisciplinary experts, visionary sponsors, and passionate enthusiasts in the world of venomous animals, their venoms, and the innovative uses of venom-derived products.

Our 2024 Attendees:

Venom Week offers unparalleled access to the researchers and clinicians at the forefront of venom science. Our 2024 symposium welcomed renowned scientists, with a strong presence of doctoral-level professionals from the U.S. and around the world.
